Breed Theatre.

The selection of the all-star cast for Monte Cristo was accomplished after what may be termed as a super-imposed character description was obtained from many of the readers of the famous Dumas story of that name. The opinion of the readers was obtained with regard to the general description of the various leading characters—noted—then visualized by artists. The cast was selected with these conditions in mind, the histrionic ability of the individual, of course, being seriously considered.

As a result of this novel method of selection one of the most capable all-star casts ever assembled for one picture was obtained. Monte Cristo is a William Fox production directed by Emmett J. Flynn and will be shown at the Breed theatre tomorrow.

For the leading role, that of Edmund Dante, later Monte Cristo himself, John Gilbert was selected. Mr. Gilbert is a young man of exceptional ability and he contributes a spiritual quality to his work which bears out the character to perfection. He has been the star in other William Fox productions.

Estelle Taylor has the role of the sweetheart of Edmund Dante and later appears as the wife of Ferdinand, one of the conspirators against Dante. Another feminine role especially commendable is that of the Princess Hildegarde, which Virginia Faire was selected. Miss Faire has had important roles in a number of successful film dramas of recent release.

The role of Caderousse, the innkeeper, whose fear of telling the truth caused Edmund Dante to be thrown in prison for twenty long years, was given to William V. Mong. Few if any cinema actors are the peers of Mr. Mong in character bits. He is thoroughly alive with his character, always sincere and his part of Mercutio, the Conventual Yankee, brought forth much commendable comment.

One of the most dominating characters in Monte Cristo is that of the villain, the unscrupulous and merciless king's prosecutor. This part is taken by Robert McKim, whose reputation as a villain is well known and is admitted. As a "heavy" he has many successes to his credit.

The role of the abbe who teaches the youth Dante his wisdom during his confinement and who is later Dante's where his fortune is hidden just before he dies, is taken by that veteran character actor, Spottiswood Aiken. The roles of Ferdinand and that of Dante's two conspirators are exceptionally well handled by Ralph Cloninger and Albert Price, respectively. Mr. Cloninger is a well known character actor and Mr. Price makes his picture debut in Monte Cristo. He has won a unique reputation in stock on the west coast recently.

The role of the faithful servant to the count is played by George Seligmann, the most successful "rough heavy" in motion pictures. Other important roles which will give to Monte Cristo one of the most splendid casts ever assembled are taken by Harry Lombard, Al Pilon, Gaston Ollas, Francis MacDonald, Jack Cosgrove and Maud George.

Two features and seven stars at the Strand Monday.

Faith is a tremendous factor in promoting the success of men in all walks of life, according to Thomas McElhannon, star in If You Believe It, It's So, his new picture at the Strand theatre announced, booked for early presentation here, theory is that if you believe a thing firmly, it must be so.

I feel that I am willing to bank on my statement that this picture will be one of the best in which I have ever appeared. Paramount believes in it and to prove it gave me a supporting cast that couldn't be beaten. Just consider the list. Pauline Stark is leading woman; Joseph Douglas was the Miracle Man in which picture which proved enormously popular; Theodore Roberts, one of the greatest actors in the profession; Charles Ogle, another fine character actor; Charles French, Tom Kennedy, E. J. Brady and Lura Ann, where could you find a finer line-up? Tom Foreman directed the picture, discussed it with me often and over again. We developed every point to its last possible degree. And we can't see where there's a loophole for doubt.

Mr. McElhannon will be seen in If You Believe It, It's So, at the Strand theatre Monday. The Strand is preparing to handle record crowds.

The second big feature in Oh, Mabel, Behave, is a picture which will make your mouth water to see the amber fluid, which in the old days was called "ale," though you may feel that it is something of a sacrifice to see it without beer.

Giving a shower-bath to several people. This is but one of the incidents in the five reels packed with excitement that is entitled Oh, Mabel, Behave.

Mabel Normand, Mabel Normand, Owen Moore and Ford Sterling are the four incomparable stars in the production which was directed by Mark Seimet, whose name in the cinema world is well known. With that of D. W. Griffith, his talent as a comedian is without a peer.

Owen Moore and Ford Sterling are two stars of the first rank who are always welcomed by the public.

It is most unusual for four such stars to appear in the same production, which is so full of humorous incidents and the up-to-date comedy.

Whether it would be a huge success on its own account. The Strand theatre has secured this quadruple attraction for the enjoyment of its patrons, and will make it a real gala occasion with a special musical program and stage settings.

No advance in prices.

Breed Theatre.

The Broadway Theatre, one of the most interesting pictures seen in this city for a long time, will close its engagement at the Breed theatre with today's performance. Pearl White, the celebrated Fox star, gives play in this story to all the emotions of which she is known to be capable, in her role of a hostess in a Broadway cabaret. Her beauty, spirit and the dramatic scenes she wears lend unusual distinction to the picture.

Other pictures on the bill include Charles H. Brent, the Get Out from Hatch, the Faith News and a Summertime comedy.

Irish Band Superbly Renders Fine Program Before Big Audience.

(Reviewed in Milford Daily News.)

Before a house as crowded as it was enthusiastic, the Irish Regimental Band, which the Opera House last night, presented a fine program of Irish music, vocal and instrumental, that will be long remembered. The ability of the band to present orchestral scores without any strings, and the flute duet and obbligato, the brass sextettes and octettes, cornet solos added greatly to the program. Especially delicious was the Broadway Theatre. One hundred generations of women have lived since the day of the great prophet Isaiah and womanhood has undergone many changes. And never before in novel, stage or screen has that modern dynamo of ever-changing emotions—The Woman of Today—been pictured so realistically in all her strength and weakness as in Daniel Carson Goodman's amazing screen drama, What's Wrong With the Women? announced for exhibition at the Broadway theatre on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday only.

What's Wrong With the Women? unfolds in vividly dramatic sequences a story of mighty revelations of character, of revelations of the heart and soul and answers with blows like the Hammers of Thor the problem it sets for itself—What's Wrong With the Women?

In the cast are such notable players as Wilton Lacy, in the role of the wealthy architect who strikes vainly to understand and to restrain his wife and daughter; Rod L. Rocque, as a young husband engulfed in debts by his erring wife's extravagances; Constantine Bennett, beautiful young daughter of the architect; the dramatic Mrs. Shaw; Barbara Cartland, Julia Swann; Gordon, Huntley Gordon, Hedda Hopper and Paul McAllister, constituting what photography critics have acclaimed as one of the most brilliant casts ever assembled for a motion picture, and to top it all you have a guarantee that this is seven acts of the finest entertainment you can see.

The company is a special pre-arranged showing of Will Rogers in The Ropin' Fool, showing Rogers at his best.
